DEATH OF MISS CAPWELL.

Salem Loses a Prominent Member of the Educational Profession.

It was known yesterday that Mis-Olive M. Capwell, assistant principal of the Lincoln school of this city, was to have a difficult surgicial operation performed for removal of a tumor.

Her many friends lived through a day of greatest anxiety, ending in the terrible shock caused by the news of her death at half past three. Drs. Cartwright and Jessup, assisted by two other Salem physicians had placed her under the influence of anesthetics shortdo not wish to carry over any ly before noon and successfully removed the tumor, which was large and seriously attached, and the patient had not strength enough to recover from the shock.

The news of Miss Capwell's death soon spread over the city and there was a constant stream of inquiring friends tendering sympathy to her bereaved mother who only recently came out from Iowa to make her home with her. They had fitted up a comfortable cottage and were enjoying life together in South Salem near her school work when the rude messenger came so suddenly and unexpectedly.

Miss Capwell had conducted her with her for three hours but no resus- ey: citation seemed possible. Compson Will Be There.

When Adjutant General Mitchell found that he could not go to San Francisco to participate in the launching of the Oregon, he communicated with Governor Pennoyer, suggesting that Genera! Compson should go in his stead. The governor, feeling that the state should be represented, accepted the suggestion and directed the adjutantgeneral to designate the general in his place. This was done, and General Compson proceeded to San Francisco last night. He will act as escort to Miss Ainsworth in the ceremonies incident to the christening of the battleship.
